“MIND LOVE” CAUSED DIVORCE SUIT ---“IS ‘MIND LOVE’ POSSIBLE?”

Nixola Greeley-Smith Says With Women Love Begins In the Mind, and With Men It Finishes There—“A Man Loves a Woman’s Mind Last.”

BY NIXOLA GREELEY-SMITH

New York, March 9.—Mrs. Lois Burnett Rantoul, a granddaughter of Poet Lowell, sued her husband for divorce because of a disagreement brought on by her acknowledgment to him that she loved Chester C. Rumrill, a wealthy yachtsman of Boston and New York. The love she felt for Mr. Rumrill was, however, “purely mind love,” Mrs. Rantoul declared.

I wonder if there really is such a thing as mind love between a man and a woman?

Only human beings who shut their eyes to the obvious truth can deny that a married man may find women other than his wife intellectually stimulating and that the most devoted housewife and mother is mentally benefited by intellectual friendship with other men.

The pall of Puritanism lay over the United States so long that it is only within the last 20 years that the married woman in America has been conceded the right to be more attractive than the lady of old Japan who shaved her eyebrows and blackened her teeth as soon as she became a wife.
